DORA

(Spoken)
Ah, Marie, it's so wonderful for two people to be in love.

MARIE

Yes, even for one people.

DORA

What?

MARIE

Nothing.

DORA

Is that why you're going to Washington? Did Mr. LaGuardia invite you?

MARIE

No, Ben Marino.

DORA

Is he your latest?

MARIE

It's business, Dora, just business.

DORA

(Grinning)
Monkey business.

MARIE

Oh, Dora, don't be so romantic.

DORA

(Runs to hatboxes)
Well, I brought my two best hats up. See -- put this on -- it'll knock him dead.

MARIE

(Puts on hat)
How do I look?

DORA

I don't know. Take a look.

MARIE

(Examines herself in a mirror)
I'll tell you the truth, Dora. I'm going because Mr. Marino thinks I have influence. He thinks I can tell Mr. LaGuardia what to say in Congress -- which is utterly ridiculous. But -- oh, well, at least I'll get a chance to see Washington.

DORA

You better take a good look, Marie, because Floyd says if Mr. LaGuardia doesn't stop trying to send American boys over there to fight for those foreigners -- Floyd says he'll never get elected again.

MARIE

Well, at least that would keep him in New York.

DORA

(Grinning)
I knew it! I can see right through you. I knew it!

MARIE

Thank you for the hat. Thanks loads. Good-bye.
